

A DEMONSTRATION of various
CHAPTER PAGE STYLES in order of
INCREASING Effort
to
RECREATE IN SCRIBUS

---

- Categories From the Simplest to Most Time Consuming:
- A. Pure typography, all inline
  - B. Images and other decorations UNDER text, applied via master page templates
  - C. Images and other decorations OVER or wrapping text, applied via scrapbook
  - D. Pure typography, some elements moved to in separate frames
  - E. Any combination of B/C + D
  - F. Designs which hand-apply images, or other decorative elements to each individual chapter manually. Also elements that require fussing:
    - a. First line of chapter in a different color
    - b. First line of chapter in small caps
    - c. Setting custom contour lines around images/drop caps
    - d. Arranging text within a complex shape
    - e. etc.

Basic Steps to set up the Chapter Page Design

All:

- Look at the fic & decide what elements you'll include (title, number) and how much space they'll take. Will there be left/right chapter starts or will they all start right?
- Make mockup
- Make mirror left page mockup if applicable
- Set fonts, spacing, sizes etc. using Paragraph & Character Styles

B+

- Move elements that should be behind (not interrupting text flow) to a master page template
- Easiest way is to select the whole mockup, copy, open the Master Page edit menu, paste in. Delete the main text frame from the template

C, D, E+

- Delete all items from your mockup that go on the master page and the main text frame. Then copy all remaining elements (the items which text will flow around)
- Open Scrapbook. Find your copied items and right click. Select "move to main" and give them a memorable name like RightChapterTitle.

F

Wait and see...

I highly recommend doing a print test of your mockup before committing to the design!

Implementing Chapter Page Design Per Chapter

All:

- As you iterate through the text, insert a frame break (or two, if you want all chapter starts on the right) before each chapter.
- Unlink text frames & cut text at chapter start.

B+

- Apply the chapter master page template

C+

- Open scrapbook and double click on your chapter page contents to insert them

D, E+

- Run the TextToFrames script

F

- As Applicable:
  1. Set first line of chapter in a different color
  2. Set first line of chapter in small caps
  3. Set custom contour lines around images/drop caps
  4. Arrange text within a complex shape
  5. Finesse long chapter titles into space
  6. Insert per-chapter image

etc

Before proceeding to the next chapter, handle any hyphenation or widow/orphan control changes you want to make on the chapter text. This makes sure you know what side page your next chapter starts on.

Type A: Pure Typography

- Chapter number either from fic or generated via script
- Ornaments below title generated via script
- Title styled
- Space before & after title used to set spacing on page
- ChapterStart uses 2 line drop cap, same font as title
- By adjusting the "offset baseline" of the drop cap we can simulate a raised capital. However, this messes up the text flow of the lines beneath.

Fonts:

- Nouveau Uncial Caps (Chapter title, drop cap)
- Powell Antique (text)
- Novo Deco Ornaments (ornaments)

Alternate method: The ornament beneath the title could also be placed on a master page (Type B). Putting the ornament on the master page locks its position, so this method works best if the chapter name/number will only ever be one line.
